CARING FOR YOUR TOYS

Safe sex toy practice:

STIs can be passed from one person to another when using sex toys. It is very important to understand how to keep them clean and safe!

If sex toys are being shared, it is important to use condoms on your toys. Also use a new condom when switching from vaginal to anal or oral sex. Certain toys can harbour STIs, so using a condom can help prevent this problem.

Lubricants:

- Water based lubricants can be used on all toys
- Silicone lubricants will break down silicone toys
- Avoid oils or petroleum based jellies because they will cause condoms to break, and toys to break down.

Washing:

Most toys can be washed by scrubbing with mild soap and warm water. It is important to scrub gaps or indentations if present on the toy because these areas are prone to harboring bacteria and viruses. Don't immerse toys that are electric or battery operated in water. Rinse the toy with warm water and air dry after.

If using toy cleaners, some may be more effective than others. Most cleaners usually have anti-bacterial, anti-viral, and anti-fungal properties to them and destroy these contaminants on contact.

Toy material	Care	Lubes
Latex	Soap and water	Water or silicone
Silicone	Soap and water	WATER
Pyrex glass	Soap and water Boiling	Water or silicone
Hard plastic	Soap and water	Water or silicone
Cyberskin and UR3	Soap and water	Water or silicone

Storing your toys:

It is important to store your sex toys correctly so you can enjoy them for longer. Some types of sex toys are very sensitive and need to be stored properly.

It is best to keep your toys out of direct heat or sunlight as some toys can melt. Toys are best kept wrapped in a breathable material in a drawer or cupboard.

It's also useful to store toys with the batteries out of the toy as this can make batteries last longer. It will also protect your own personal health as batteries corrode over time and may leak onto your toy.

BE SAFE & HAVE FUN!
